Pala-U Scenic Park

Section 3: Suan Khiri (Hill Garden) surrounds a low hill further to the east which lies outside the National Forest. This garden is note-worthy for splendid views

Pala-U Waterfall

Pala-U means bamboo forest in the Karen language. It is found on the south side of Kaeng Krachan National Park. There are two falls: Pala-U Yai (a major) and Pala-U Noi (a minor). The waterfall has 16 steps, making it one of the highest in Thailand.

Humid Rain Forest

The park covers an area of woodland and rain forest which dates back nearly 1000 years. There is a good chance of seeing wildlife, particularly gibbons (which will certainly be heard, if not seen) and many rare species of bird-life.

The Karen (Kariang or Yang) People

The Karen are an ethno-linguistic minority in Thailand. There are major divisions within this group and these classify the various tribes. The Karen are significant in Myanmar and have their own State, often at conflict with the Military dictatorship. The Karen are famous for their relationships with elephants and are often seen as the mahouts who work with elephants. They also are known for their colorful traditional clothes and for their energetic and jubilant festival dances. Foremost, the Karens are known for their hospitality and friendliness which they readily extend to everyone.

Changwat Petchaburi

Kaeng Krachan National Park

The park includes a reservoir lake, waterfalls, caves, mountains. It is almost entirely covered with evergreen forest which supports ecologically, economically and scientifically valuable plants and animals including many wild elephants. The park is an excellent place for recreation and education.
